Police Court

Information is wanted by the mayor of York, Pa., of the whereabouts of James McGuire, who it is thought was located in this city for some time. The local police have been asked to assist in the search for McGuire.

"Crip" Cushman, of Prospect, tanked up on hard cider, and then came to Marion last night to have some fun. He had not been in town long, when he was arrested by Officer Hostetter and locked up at the city prison. Cushman promised to be good in the future and the mayor released him without a fine.

SAYS SCOTTY WAS FAKING

Not a Deaf Mute Writes
His Cousin.

CLEVER RUSE PLANNED

To Separate the People
From Their Good Money

Young Sandow was Recently Wedded to Miss Cora Kramer of This City by Justice Conley.

The romance of the marriage of Edward Scott, a supposed deaf mute, of Sterling, Illinois, to Miss Cora Kramer, of this city, has been exploded by a letter received from Harry G. Thomas, of Chicago, a cousin of the groom. Thomas, in a letter to Justice Charles H. Conley, who performed the ceremony, and in another to the Mirror, revealed Saturday says that Scott is not a deaf mute but is merely posing as one in order to be better able to separate the people from their money.

"At one time he was a student at a deaf mute school and was progressing nicely," writes Thomas, "but, unfortunately he talked aloud in his sleep one night and consequently was dismissed from school."

Scott and Miss Kramer were married by Justice Conley several weeks ago and the fact that the groom was apparently a mute, while the bride was not so afflicted, caused their wedding to attract widespread attention. An account of the ceremony appeared in the Chicago Inter Ocean, and it was there that Thomas says he first learned of his cousin's little game.

While securing the marriage license and while Justice Conley was tying the knot, Scott successfully carried out the actions of a mute. He told the justice that he was able to tell what people said by merely watching their lips. The justice repeated the ceremony slowly, so that Scott would have no difficulty in following him.

When it came to asking him if he would take Miss Kramer to be his lawful wife, the question was written and Scott immediately wrote the answer "Yes."

Following the ceremony, Scott and his bride took their departure and the supposed mute has not been seen since. Previous to the time of his marriage, he had been doing a strong arm stunt in a local saloon. He makes a profession of traveling about the country, breaking chains, lifting weights and giving other exhibitions of his strength. The fact that he was supposed to be a mute seemed to help make him popular.

Thomas writes that he has known Scott since childhood and is in a good position to know whether he is a mute.

"I have no personal animosity to."

ward Mr. Scott, whatever, but I thought it my duty to put a stop to such actions if it lay in my power."

Miss Kramer, the young woman who married Scott, is the sixteen-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward D. Kramer, of North State street.

MARION TO HAVE TWO DIRECTORIES

Rival Companies are at Work on New Books.

Each Company Promises to Give People the Best Directory on the Market.

At the present time, two city directories are being prepared by two separate companies and the indications are that there will be a lively fight to secure the better directory and the majority of the patronage.

The Polk company, of Columbus, which has always had the field exclusively, is one of the concerns and the other is the Stark Directory company, of Canton. Both concerns have operated for a number of years, and the contest between the two will be watched with interest.

Each company promises to place the most complete directory on the market, and with the many improvements to be made the new directories will doubtless outclass anything in the directory line ever sold in this city heretofore.

Advertising and subscriptions are now being solicited by agents of both companies. The work of compiling the remainder of the volumes will be commenced about May 1.

SUBWAY PLAN RIDICULED

By Prominent Officials of the Roads.

ONE MILLION DOLLARS

Would be Required to Carry
Out the Idea.

They Admit the Plan Would be a Good Thing for all Concerned but Impractical Because of the Cost.

The lowering of the Big Four and Erie railroad tracks through the city as advocated by a large number of prominent citizens, is regarded as more or less of a joke by the officials of the railroads interested.

A prominent official of one of the lines was interviewed recently in regard to the projected improvement. He said, "The people of Marion must have plenty of money to spend when they talk of lowering the railroad tracks and of placing both lines in a single subway. I see by the papers that those interested claim the improvement will not cost more than $300,000. Well, let them try it and find out. The work could not be done for a cent less than one million dollars, and before it was entirely completed it would probably run far over that sum."

"Suppose that the Big Four should abandon its right of way and be given trackage in the Erie subway. Then the Big Four would have to be reimbursed for coding its valuable right-of-way along Mill street, and the Erie would have to be paid a fat price for the trackage given the Big Four. If the subway were placed along Mill street, the Erie would demand enough money to more than pay its share of the improvement for its property."

The official concluded by saying that the improvement would be a good thing for the city, for the railroads and for all concerned, but that it is entirely impractical, on account of its great cost.

A meeting will be called in the near future and the city council, the citizens' committee and representatives of the railroad companies will talk over the matter. At that time if the railroad representatives convince the local committees that the cost will be as great as is claimed, it is probable that the improvement agitation will be dropped until such time as Marion has enough money to spend to justify the construction of the subway.
